

10/11/08

“What Tangled Webs”

by
Tom Holbrook

“What Tangled Webs They Weave”

Wake up America! As a follow-up to last week’s article I’m reminding you that there are only three weeks to go until you go into the voting booth and make the most important decision of your lifetime. In my research specifically for these articles and other reading I’m learning more and more about the false front that Barack Obama is putting out for the American people. Just listening to his grandiose speeches filled with even more grandiose promises to the world is beginning to scare me. He is becoming emboldened by the adulation of the main street media who are enamored with his oratory skills and the color of his skin.

Before you call that a racist statement pull back a minute and listen. Chris Matthews http://www.salon.com/politics/war\_room/2008/01/08/matthews/ and Keith Olberman, the recently demoted duo of MSNBC have been known to gush and actually shed faux tears while exclaiming, in so many words, how far our country has come and that we will be looked upon more favorably by the international powers if we elect a black man and what a feather in our cap as a nation, it will be to show we are no longer a racist, politically incorrect country. The two were removed from their jobs as Election Night First Chair positions because of their outrageous fawning over Obama and over-the-top negative statements about McCain and the Republican Party. Other pundits in TV, Magazine and Newspaper outlets have shared those same feelings encouraging folks to vote for Obama, if for no other reason than, to show the world we are no longer a backward country... socially speaking.

The real sore point with me in Obama’s speeches is the constant harangue that the Fannie Mae, Freddie Mac, and the total Investment Banking scandal is attributable to the Bush Administration’s demand for less regulation and poor handling of our financial markets. Out and out lies reminiscent of a WWII despot who said, “If you tell a lie long enough and loudly enough, the people will begin to believe it.” Obama knows, in reality, the roots of this financial fiasco can be traced back to Clinton’s administration and the Democratic House who fought tooth and nail to prevent regulatory action against the above-mentioned banks and investment houses. I know some of you hate Bush so much that you won’t believe a word that I say against Obama or the Dems, but I’m providing a link to a video of C-Span's coverage several years ago of a Congressional Hearing pertaining to this very issue. Please... please... copy this down and go on-line to hear the real truth.

You owe it to yourself and your country to do this. The link to see and hear the actual people responsible for this mess telling you in their own words that there is no looming crisis in the financial industry is http://www.youtube.com/watch?v= MGT\_cSi7Rs .

As you watch the video and hear the accusing statements by members of the Black Caucus saying the Hearing against Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac was being handled by a group with a "lynch mentality," please remember that the $700 Billion + bailout we just witnessed could have been prevented several years ago if Bush, McCain and the Federal Regulators already in place had been listened to and the warnings heeded.

Go there today!

#