

2/23/08

“Bye, Bye Hillary”
by Tom Holbrook

Time for Hillary to hang it up.... According to the pollsters Barack Obama now has an 80%+ chance of clinching the nomination of the Democratic Party for the Presidency of these United States.

Now I realize that the polls and early newspaper headlines also proudly and boldly predicted that “Dewey Defeats Truman” in a race that many of you weren’t even around for back in the 40’s. That headline was very embarrassing for the newspaper in question. Polls can be wrong!

However, Obama is real and Hillary can’t hide. He has won, as of this writing the last 10 primaries and caucuses including Hawaii & Wisconsin and leads by 150 in the all-important delegate count between the two. I know this is old news and you’ve read it, heard about it and re-read it, but have you actually thought about it?

You Hillary fans out there, and I know there are quite a few of you... you’ve got to understand that the lady you’re supporting has really nothing going for her other than she occupied the White House with her philandering husband for 8 years and is claiming that is her “qualifications” for being ready “day one” to bring this country back from the brink of... well, I’m not sure what brink she’s talking about, but no-way, no-how, no-where, is she ready to bring this country anywhere.

Look at her and listen real closely... she’s now asking her followers to identify anything that Obama has accomplished in his “short career.” What you, as her followers should be asking her is, “Hillary, name one thing you have accomplished in the last 20 years.” Can you name one thing that she made happen as an attorney in Arkansas, a First Lady in the White House, or a Senator from New York? Absolutely nothing! She’s promised everything and produces nothing!

Her job with the Law Firm in Arkansas was achieved through cronyism... by the way I’m not against cronyism, it’s just that she wants everyone to think she acquired her position because of her high intellect and judicial knowledge and litigation skills. Not true! She also botched a couple of things while there, illegally by the way, which she conveniently “couldn’t recollect” while under oath. Her first assignment as a First Lady was to put together a National Health Care Package for the country and it turned out to be the greatest debacle we have seen in a long while. Washington is still laughing and wincing at that mess up.

She also made several suggestions and/or recommendations to her husband for judicial appointments and they were too radical for the Senate even to consider and finally, when she recommended Janet Reno for Attorney General, she was approved. It is purported that Bill Clinton later said of Reno that she was his biggest mistake while he was President. (Other than Monica, of course.)

So now Hillary wants to bring all that “wealth of knowledge and experience” to the White House and you want to help put her there. Admit it folks, you don’t like her anymore than I do but you’re thinking that Billy Boy will be in the White House with her and, of course, giving her all his help to make things right again. Don’t believe it for a minute... everyone who knows her personally, including former members of her Secret Service detail, says she is a witch... literally, she’s a witch to work for. A woman, who rants, raves, screams, curses, and does everything in her power to make those around her miserable. She will listen to no one but herself.

You don’t have to believe me though... just buy the books written by her associates from the past and read it for yourself. Of course you probably wouldn’t believe it if you read because it would part of that “huge right wing conspiracy” that also “falsely” accused her husband of messing around with interns and other feminine fancies he came across. We all knew he would never do anything like that. Stop fooling yourself folks.

You know my feelings about Barack Obama... I think he’s a skillful orator, a very energetic young man with a lot of ideas to cure the cancerous political world in which we live and bring world peace in our lifetime. I admire his “hope” and wish it were possible that his ideas could be achieved without the super cost to our country and its culture. If I were a left leaning, liberally minded voter looking for someone to whom I could hook my political wagon it would be him... for sure, not Hillary. I do hope he wins the Democrat Nomination for President and loses to John McCain in the General Election. Maybe by the time he gets a little older that energy can be channeled in a more positive direction and he would be ready to be President.

#

